Alpesh Patel, CEO of Kana Hotel Group said “these three new builds are great additions to our aggressively growing portfolio and we’re now focusing on the next two years with eighteen other projects under construction and in development. These include some exciting dual brands in major markets, as well as new projects in states further out west where we haven’t developed before, but see tremendous opportunities”. Kevin Mahoney, president of Kana added “we’re continuing our trend of expanding with these premium Hilton and Marriott brands and are expecting these to all be market leading hotels. The unique design in these builds, such as the way we incorporated an anchor restaurant into the build of the Hampton Village of Providence is exceptional and honestly something guests wont expect with some of these brands. All three are very well done, but the interior design of the Embassy Atlanta Gwinnett / Sugarloaf in particular came out amazing and will no doubt dominate that market once guests get a chance to experience it”.
